Trevor Mullin is a business law associate based in Foley & Lardner LLP's Los Angeles office. He is a member of the Transactions Practice Group and supports clients in equity and debt financings, mergers and acquisitions, corporate formations and governance, and securities law compliance. Trevor has counseled a broad range of clients, including investment funds, startup businesses, nonprofits, and public companies.

Throughout his career, Trevor's previous experience has provided him meaningful insights in addressing the unique needs of clients in the technology, energy, and life science industries. He enjoys working with companies and investors spearheading efforts for innovation, whether that be in the development of AI, sustainability solutions, or clean energy efforts, among others.

Trevor is a graduate of the UCLA School of Law, where he specialized in business law. During law school, Trevor started his career at Foley as a summer associate. Prior to his time at Foley, he served as a legal fellow at the Williams Institute, an LGBTQ+ focused law and policy think tank. Before law school, Trevor began his legal career as a corporate and securities paralegal for a global law firm in the San Francisco Bay Area.
