Patrick McMahon is a partner and litigation attorney with Foley & Lardner LLP. Patrick focuses his practice on labor and employment matters and has significant experience in general commercial litigation. In Patrick's labor and employment practice, he has successfully defended employers in a number of forums, including federal and state courts, and federal, state, and local agency proceedings. As part of his employment practice, Patrick has a unique concentration in the cannabis space. Cannabis laws vary significantly across jurisdictions, and Patrick counsels employers on the employer and employee rights as it relates to cannabis use in and out of the workplace. Patrick also provides consistent employment counseling to clients in various areas including disability accommodations under Titles I and III of the Americans with Disabilities Act, website and technology accessibility for people with disabilities, public accommodations, sexual harassment and safe workplace compliance, family and medical leave issues, wage and hour compliance, and other state and federal employment laws. In addition, Patrick's deep experiences in defending clients against the Illinois Biometric Information Protection Act (BIPA) claims has successfully resolved dozens of cases in both state and federal court, in addition to writing several articles on BIPA's latest developments.

Patrick also works with clients and attorneys in the Foley's Government Enforcement Defense & Investigations Practice to respond to government investigations, conduct internal investigations, and litigate disputes. Patrick has successfully defended clients, and particularly health care providers, in multiple False Claims Act and whistleblower matters.

Prior to practicing law, Patrick served as a cyber and communications officer in the United States Air Force from 2006 – 2012 at various national and international locations overseeing 20-plus airmen in roles that included leading a team to engineer, install, and test a new AOC Weapon Systems; orchestrating a 12-week upgrade with 10 agencies to relocate a $40 million European Air Operation Center; serving as aide de camp to an Air Force Major General in day-to-day events and devising long-term strategies; and directing support for air traffic control systems, weather radar, telephone, wireless, classified/unclassified data networks, and information management for over 6,000 customers.

Patrick currently serves as the co-chair of the firm's Veterans & Allies Affinity Group.
