Matthew Myungchul An is an experienced debt finance attorney, with prior experiences that range from corporate law to banking, real estate and aircraft finance, energy and infrastructure, as well as compliance and regulatory functions. He is a member of the firm's Finance and Fund Formation & Investment Management (FFIM) Practices and the Innovative Technology Sector.

Matt represents public and privately held companies, financial institutions, and private equity sponsors in all stages of corporate finance transactions. His work spans over multiple industries and diverse debt capital structures, including acquisition financings, syndicated and bilateral financings, mezzanine financings, bridge financings, asset-based and cash flow financings, and multiple lien and subordinated debt financings. His experience includes debt financing transactions involving a complex debt stack and global collateral packages in the United States, Europe, South Korea, Japan, and China, as well as distressed loans where he represents borrowers and lenders on lender liability management, collateral review, loan modifications, forbearances, bridge financing and debtor-in-possession loans.

He also regularly represents funds clients in various fund finance transactions such as subscription line facilities, NAV facilities, Manco loans and secondary portfolio acquisition financings.

His practice includes the representation of emerging growth companies in the technology, healthcare, food and beverages and other industries in all stages of venture debt transactions, as well as insurance companies in various types of insurance-wrapped intellectual property-backed financings.

Prior to joining Foley, he has worked as Legal Counsel in two fortune 500 companies and as a counsel at another AmLaw 50 law firm in New York City.
