Massa Almufti is a law graduate who supports clients across legal, legislative, and community development matters, drawing on her experience in both private practice and public service. As a member of the transactions practice group, she has contributed to legal research, document drafting, and client communications at Foley & Lardner LLP, and previously served in roles with the U.S. House of Representatives and the Dallas Family Court. Massa's work spans family law, legislative policy, and community-focused legal aid.

She was a member of the Texas International Law Journal's Executive Board and participated in the Entrepreneurship and Community Development Clinic. She also worked with the UT Housing Clinic and Texas Rio Grande Legal Aid to represent low-income families in their housing-related legal problems. Massa earned her J.D. from The University of Texas School of Law, where she was active in First Generation Law Students and the Muslim Law Student Association. She also holds a Master's and Bachelor's degree in Political Science from UT Dallas.
