A trusted advisor, Myles Berman leads teams that close deals, and advocates for clients when their business goals are challenged by the legislative process.

Myles offers clients four decades of experience in corporate, real estate, and financial transactions, bringing positive outcomes to each client's unique situation, including in those instances where business, law, and the government intersect. A former co-chair of the firm's national Government & Public Policy Practice, Myles represents clients before state, county, and local governments, as well as regulatory and administrative agencies. To ensure clients receive optimum service, he maintains affiliations with the firm's Environmental Regulation Practice, Energy Sector, Manufacturing Sector, and Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) Practice. Myles previously served as Government Department group head of one of Chicago's oldest law firms, where he co-chaired the firm's Government Affairs/Public Affairs practice. He is a registered lobbyist, pursuant to applicable state, county, and local laws.

Throughout his career, Myles has counseled and provided legal services to utilities; private equity funds; U.S.-based global manufacturers; Tier I automotive suppliers; public companies and closely held businesses; multistate agricultural chemicals and inputs retailers; public-private partnership (PPP) projects, including the privatization of a major airport, airport concessions, and toll road; and major banks and financial institutions.

Myles is a director of Foley's Federal Political Action Committee, and is a member of the firm's and Chicago office's Pro Bono Committees. He formerly served as managing partner of the firm's Chicago office.
