Christian Borders works in our Business Law department as a member of the firm's Transactions Practice Group and is based in the Salt Lake City office. Prior to joining Foley, Christian held a summer associate position at a law firm where he supported insurance litigation matters and contributed to legal research on contract law and trial procedures. He also served as a residential instructor at The Keswick School, where he worked closely with high school students and gained experience in education and crisis intervention.

Christian began at Foley as a summer associate in 2024. His work focused on early-stage investment rounds, where he helped draft transaction documents and participated in strategic discussions with clients and attorneys. He collaborated with Foley's multi-regional Venture and Growth Capital team, supporting startups and venture capital investors across the West Coast and Mountain West regions.

During law school, Christian founded the Rural Law Students Association and participated in the Civil Rights Clinic. He also conducted legal research for the Department of Defense on international space law compliance.
